

1940's Howard Pollet Nokona G51

This is the best Nokona splitfinger model in my opinion along with the Joe Jackson. The best Nokonas had the triple stitching around the wrist opening. This is a big high quality model. The lining is great. The only flaw is the light name on the wrist strap.....$125

1940's Howard Pollet Outward Seams

This is a huge beast of a glove, even bigger than the other Pollet except this one has the rare outward seams. It has a faint name on the side of the thumb as well as mildew stains. It needs a cleaning. I have one other outward seam Nokona so this is a dupe otherwise I would keep it in a heartbeat as these are extremely rare models. Marked Professional Model.....$150

1940's Joff Cross Nokona G33

This is the fourth best Nokona splitfinger model in my opinion behind the Jackson, Pollet and Higgins. It's huge and top quality. The lining and all the leather, interior and exterior, is supple and perfect. The stampings are a bit light but that's the only thing I can note. Great glove.....$125

1940's Nokona U.S. Military Model

This is a fat high quality glove. It's faintly marked U.S. so it's pretty generic. The leather is super thick. The lining feels great. It needs a cleaning as it has some dark spots, probably mildew, that would clean up nicely. The stampings are light.....$100

1940's Tony York Nokona G12

This is a very supple model inside and out. The lining is great. It is soft and is broken in nicely. The color is one of the more desirable burgundy or oxblood colors. This one came with a box originally but I used my mint York to put with the box so this is a dupe. The only flaw is two initials to the right of the tag.....$100

Baseball Glove Collector.com

1953-57 Carl Erskine Nokona G57

This was Nokona's very best and most expensive glove from 1953-57. It's huge. The lining has a small hole in the center but feels good up inside. The top lace is broken but an easy repair. Just needs to be shined up. This is a nice big glove.....$100

1940's Nokona Splitfinger

I think this is a G12 and probably a Tony York but I can't tell because the stampings are light. The lining is smooth and feels great on the hand. Nice big quality glove but does have some scuffs on the inside of the web. This is one to play catch with.....$65

1940's Pinky Higgins Nokona G47

This is a big glove in great condition. It's a tank. The biggest and best splitfinger gloves Nokona made in my opinion in order are the Joe Jackson, Howard Pollet, Pinky Higgins and Joff Cross with Tony York the next in line. This one feels great with a nice lining but light ink on the back of the thumb.....$100

1940's Tony York Nokona G12

This is a great condition Tony York double tunnel web glove. The exterior leather is supple. The lining feels great and the stampings are nice and bolder than the other. It has a red mark across the tag.....$85

1961 Bob "Riverboat" Smith Nokona BSB1

This is a cool-looking model and the only Nokona with white eyelets up the pinky side. This one is broken in nicely and feels great to play catch with. It's in nice playable condition. It has a Ristankor Strap. Just shine it up..... $85