

c. 1890's-00's Full Round Catchers Mitt

Very rare white catchers mitt and only one of two currently known in the hobby. Largely speculated that it was based on the LeMat or Waring patents of the early 20th century. The palm and circumference are VG+. Lining is soft and fully intact with some cosmetic issues. The piping is dry and worn at the heel. One of the backstraps is missing one side of its buckle. Mitt shows very little use. It measures 10.5" tall and 2.5" thick. This mitt has impeccable lineage.....$9,500

c. 1930's D&M PG5 Playground Model Three Finger Glove

Super well-made D&M full sized three finger glove. It says "Playground" just below the pocket. Also says "Approved By Rules Committee" and signed by the chairman on the left heel. Has something else written in the pocket but I don't know what it is. Super nice example of a three finger.....$800

(From JD – Well I do! If you haven't read "Doc: The 50-Year Sporting Goods Sales Odyssey of H.B. Hughes" then you oughtta. There is an excerpt of his travels and glove dealings in Mexico in the Baseball Glove Library on the website. This is an important model in our hobby and they came in different colors and were sold all over the U.S. in 1946-47. I have a couple different ones. Joe, TGC, told me the story nearly 30 years ago.)

Kaufmann's "The Big Store" Collection Featuring Webless Glove

This six-item lot takes us back in time to the early days of retail department stores in America. Dating back to the late 19th century, Kaufmann's was at the epicenter of downtown Pittsburgh. Included in this lot are the Kaufmann's white webless glove, two different books written about "The Big Store", two postcards depicting the Pittsburgh landmark, and an early charge coin for the store.

The white webless glove measures 8.0" from left to right and 9.0" from top to bottom and has an incredible black and gold Kaufmann's patch along the thumb area. The glove is asbestos lined and retains its original silver stamping on the front ("Professional Model 02K" and on the back ("3.50"). Not much is known about this glove or the manufacturer. The webless design is a bit of a mystery as well, as it appears that this glove is from the 1910s era. The glove has been thoroughly inspected in person by one of the hobby's most respected leather craftsmen and his expert conclusion was, "I can find no evidence that there was ever a web sewn into this glove."

Accompanying the seemingly one-of-a-kind webless glove are two paperback books that capture life in America through the eyes of this famed department store from its beginning days through the building being named a National Landmark in 1981. The books were published in 2016 and 2107, respectively, and are loaded with amazing pictures throughout. The two postcards are the same depiction of the iconic store and the hustle-n-bustle of downtown Pittsburgh -- one in black and white (postmarked 1905) and one in color (postmarked 1914). And long before plastic charge cards came along, metal charge coins were how business got done back in the day. While I am not sure about the date from when this charge coin was used, my guess is it was pretty early based on the coin's number -- perhaps from around the same time as the glove.

This is your chance to grab some incredible Americana that takes us back to simpler times of how life was and the beginning days of big department stores.....$1,500

Model DW - Elmer Riddle

Compact, flexible, streamlined, "Natural Contour" Model (Licensed under Pat. No. 2231204) bearing signature of Elmer Riddle, of the Cincinnati "Reds". Genuine horsehide with full horsehide lining, and hand formed asbestos felt pad. Inner processed greased palm, oiled back. Leather welted diverted finger seams and reinforced thumb seam. Wide leather wrist strap. ★ 6.95—Each, $9.25

c. 1940's Elmer Riddle Goldsmith DW Glove

There's no shortage of Goldsmith Elmer Riddle gloves out there...except when they are in almost unused condition, like this one. It has it all: near-top-line construction, perfect butter-soft yet strong leather throughout, original laces, blazing silver stampings, "Goldsmith" button, and leather (yes) binding. There's no ink, and even the machine stitching is still white on this glove. These don't come along like this very often. c. 1900's Buckle Back Crescent Glove

This is an elusive buckle back crescent glove. It is huge for a crescent measuring in at about 10" tall and 9" wide. It's a big sturdy glove that has been expertly and meticulously repaired by The Glove Doctor in the 90's. He replaced the lining and piping and fixed the hole on the back of the pinky (visible in pic) from deteriorating further. The buckle, web and everything else is original. Of course, it feels great on the hand and is now a tough and strong glove structurally that would stand up to some vintage catch.....$895

1920's Sammy Bohne Ken-Wel 552 Glove

This near top line model from the 1920's exhibits use and wear but features supple leather. c. 1979 Wilson 1139 Pro-Issue Knuckleball Catchers Mitt

Every glove manufacturer has at least one model that is truly unique and equally rare, and what you see here is a prime example - a deadstock, unused ca. 1979 Wilson model 1139 - THE model for "Knuckler" mitts. Going back in time, as the story goes, after legendary Knuckleball pitcher Hoyt Wilhelm set an MLB record of 49 passed balls in 1959, during the 1960 season, then Orioles Manager (and former catcher) Paul Richards devised a larger catcher's mitt so his catchers could handle the Knuckleball. The Wilson company embraced this idea and began manufacturing giant catcher's mitts for needy MLB catchers. This enormous mitt has a 36" circumference, and note that there is no official model number (like A2403), but rather only the special Pro-Stock number 1139 as an identifier. Also, because of the sheer size of the glove and padding, an extra row of lacing runs along the palm face/perimeter for added support. These mitts are as rare as hen's teeth - and this MINT UNUSED example is one that you almost certainly won't see for sale again anytime soon.....$750

DE LUXE MODELS

The De Luxe Model Rogers Hornsby Glove is designed by Hornsby, who is a member of the Wilson Advisory Board, and embodies all of his ideas of a perfect glove. Into it has gone the full benefit of his years of experience, and into it has gone the skilled workmanship gained through the years of building fine equipment by the Wilson factories. The finest selected horsehide is used throughout for palm, back, fingers and lining. Diverted seams prevent ripping and give long wear. The glove is specially oil treated and is ready broke with hand tailored asbestos felt pad that gives just the right feel inspiring a confidence to scoop them off the ground or spear them out of the air. Special Hornsby tunnel loop thumb web, leather lacing at heel, and strap and button wrist fastener.

Hal Lee would get 422 at-bats that year, had the highest batting of the regulars on the 1935 Boston Braves. A left-fielder, Lee spent his entire major league career in the National League, and had his best season with the 1932 Philadelphia Phillies, hitting .303 and slugging .497. He was fifth in the league in doubles that year, seventh in triples, and eighth in home runs, playing in the Baker Bowl. He hit three home runs in a game on July 6, 1934, the second player on Boston Braves to do so (the first was Les Bell). His first major league hit was a pinch-hit home run for the 1930 Brooklyn Robins.

c. 1950's Leo Durocher MacGregor Goldsmith RL Glove in Box

Shortly after Goldsmith purchased MacGregor, they decided to adopt the MacGregor-Goldsmith moniker in 1944 for increased brand recognition and continued making high-quality baseball for years to come. The Brooklyn Dodger HOF'er Leo Durocher-endorsed high-quality "RL" glove was originally a Goldsmith model from the early 1940s dating this fine survivor glove to the mid-1940s. The leather is soft and strong and retains its original untouched patina from years of use and care, which was certainly the case since the original labeled box (complete with $10.25 price) was kept as well. While the box is showing its age with a few creases and tears here and there, nevertheless, it makes for a fine and complete display piece. For Brooklyn Dodger/Leo Durocher fans, this is a welcome addition to your collection.....$225

c. 1940's Dixie Walker Goldsmith HC Glove

Fred E. "Dixie" Walker was a scrappy outfielder who campaigned as a player for a number of teams throughout the 1930s-40s, then became a manager for several years. While Dixie-endorsed gloves are common, nearly-unused ones like this one aren't. It's really a beauty of a glove, with smooth, soft, cool, strong leather, perfect butter-soft lining, original laces, blazing silver stampings, and no ink. These don't come along like this very often; grab it while you can.....$195

AND THESE MEN LIKE AND USE THE "BABE RUTH" GLOVE

No. G41. Blacholder, Combs, Cooper, Dugan, Flagstead, M. Gaston, Geygan, Ernie Johnson, Karr, Kolp, Lamar, Lansing, Leonard, Luque, Meeker, Hack Miller, C. Mitchell, Moran, Rich Richbourg, Ross, Ruth, Schulte, Shorten, Stutz, Thurston, Traynor, Warmoth, Whaley, Wochrs and Zahriser.

No. G41B. Ehnke, Ellerbe, Gerber, McMinus, McMillan, Menosky and Veach.

No. G41. The "Babe Ruth" Glove, and it is the Glove he uses. It is made on as near a standard pattern as a Glove can be, without exaggeration in the make-up. Medium length fingers, quite wide in the hand, fairly well padded with a light palm. Made of cremore horsehide, both outside and lining. It is just a good, standard Glove, and one which will give satisfaction in almost any position. Look at the men who use it. They are its guarantee. Price $6.50

D. & M. Fielders' Gloves

THE BABE RUTH GLOVE

No. G41. This is the Glove that "Babe" Ruth uses. It is made on as near a standard pattern as a Glove can be. Medium length fingers, quite large in the hand, fairly well padded, with a light palm. A Glove without exaggeration in its construction and perhaps the most popular model in the game. Made of cremore horsehide, both outside and lining. Look at the men who use it and then decide for yourself. Price $6.50

c. 1920's Babe Ruth D&M G41 Glove

Babe endorsed Draper Maynard gloves, specifically the G41, from 1921 to 1927. He didn't only endorse them, he actually used white G41's during the most productive years of his career. The G41 model is one of the most desirable models in the hobby. The signature stamping on this example is extremely light however. There is a little slit on the back and top of the index finger but the patch is perfect and feels fantastic on the hand.....$1,500

c. 1940's Rawlings 563FST U.S. Military Basemitt

c. 1939-41 Fred Chapman Rawlings G30 Glove

Rawlings G30 glove as listed in their 39-41 catalog, is a Lynn Myers Model. Rawlings did make a Fred Chapman Model for Russell, an RB2. The glove was born a Russell but got stamped Rawlings and a Rawlings patch was added possibly to clean up the person's mistake? It has to be rare. Fred Chapman played 39-41 as a back-up shortstop for the Philadelphia Athletics. The Fred Chapman endorsement is light but readable. Very light name on strap and over all in good condition. Own a Rawlings glove that was not in the Rawlings catalog.....$350

c. 1920's Kiki Cuyler Dubow Glove

Great high-quality Dubow glove of the Pirates/Cubs HOF'er Hazen Shirley "Kiki" Cuyler. Horsehide exterior leather is thick, stampings are faint but readable, lining is smooth and thick. Has the very cool 2-eyelet tab web, and full rolled leather binding. Small seam separation at the crotch of thumb but doesn't really detract from how cool this glove is. Wait til you slide it on your hand... q-u-a-l-i-t-y. Could even be cleaned up to be superb.....$150

Early 1900's Reach Model 56 Hump Heel White Full Web

This white full web glove is soft and smooth inside and out from the white buckskin leather to the beautiful brown leather lining all the way through the finger stalls. The original palm stampings remain, including the model number (56). On the back you will see the black and gold Reach patch in fantastic condition, as well as the patent stamping along the ring finger. The glove measures 8.5" from left to right and 9.0" from top to bottom. If you like early full web gloves and condition matters to you, this is a special one. It also features the rare "patented inside hump". See the 1908 Reach catalog description.....$850

Two 19th Century Baseballs

First, is a lemon peel style baseball from the earliest days of the game, measures roughly 9" in circumference with brown leather. Second, is an early Figure 8 style baseball, measures roughly 8 1/4" in circumference and looks to be made out of white leather, which I personally haven't seen many early handmade baseballs like this made out of white leather, most normally seem to be made of less expensive brown leather. Both are in good condition, all stitching intact, and have awesome eye appeal in the display.....$995
